

Seven Books to Help Children Better Develop Their Self Esteem

Self-esteem is based on an individual's positive regard for themselves; a confidence in one's worth and abilities. A child begins to develop their self-esteem in their elementary years, which makes this an important time to foster a strong sense of self. If a child is struggling with their self-esteem, they may not feel proud of their work, and this could lead to low confidence, and a hesitation to initiate activities as they may expect failure. This low self-esteem can affect a children's ability to succeed at school work, complete tasks at home, and work towards positive relationships with others.

Our team of neuropsychologists, school psychologists, and psychology students at South County Child and Family Consultants are committed to searching the Internet and beyond to find reputable, informative, and practical tools to help children build a strong sense of self. We look for the best information online to help kids diagnosed with ADHD, Learning Disabilities, Executive Functioning Difficulties, struggles with Social Emotional Learning (SEL) skills, Autism, Depression, and Anxiety and provide you with information about how neuropsychological evaluations help in targeting concerns about self esteem. Come back regularly, as the links are updated frequently.
